I am a strong supporter of reasonable term limits and changing the length of the terms. A People's Convention should be called to overhaul the election system, redistricting, vacancies, etc. When the legislature begins in January their first priority should be to start the budget process. Currently they spend only 32 days in Albany from January 1 to April 1. No wonder the budget is late! The process should be open and all inclusive—not just the majority leaders in a room.

While statistics have shown that states with Election Day Registration show an increase of 10-12 percent, my concern is who will perform the registration and will there be safeguards in place to assure that every person who votes is entitled to vote. Some states have had success with Voter Registration and early voting at Board of Election sites that are done together but at least one day prior to Election Day. I would be willing to explore this concept as long as the privilege of voting is held high.

As far as changing the state's fiscal year to a later date, I am concerned about the timeliness of local entities i.e. the City of New York's ability to pass their budget on time when much of it depends on state revenues.

Having run in a special election this past September, I am fully in agreement that there needs to be reforms in place to level the playing field. Campaigns need finances to get their message out to the voters. So to just limit the contribution levels without any means of support would not be helpful. Studies need to be done on the success or failure of the current city campaign finance regulations. Have they helped candidates who or special interest groups? And is it worth our tax dollars?
